

BIOGRAPHY

ERIN LEE CARR

Director and Producer, Hulu's "The Swan: Behind The Mirror"

Erin Lee Carr is a two-time Emmy®-nominated filmmaker known for telling high-stakes stories about power, reputation, media scrutiny and the complexity of public narrative. Erin's unscripted work tells nuanced stories of women complicated by media scrutiny, visible in her films "At the Heart of Gold: Inside the USA Gymnastics Scandal" (HBO) and "Britney vs. Spears" (Netflix). Other notable work includes "Mommy Dead and Dearest" and "I Love You, Now Die: The Commonwealth v. Michelle Carter" for HBO. She also co-created and executive produced the scripted limited series "Murdaugh: Death in the Family" for UCP, starring Patricia Arquette and Jason Clarke, which debuted at No. 1 on Hulu in the U.S. and reached No. 1 globally on Disney+, with sustained Top 10 performance in more than 50 countries. Her work is defined by deep access, rigorous reporting, psychological nuance and a commitment to empathy over sensationalism. She splits her time between Connecticut, Los Angeles and New York City with her dog Bonnie and her wife Mish.
