HULU RENEWS HIT LEGAL DRAMA 'REASONABLE DOUBT' FOR SEASON 5 AHEAD OF ITS SEASON 4 FINALE

Season 4 Bows as Most-Watched Season to Date, With Double-Digit Percentage Gains Over Every Prior Season

- Ahead of the high-stakes fourth season finale set to stream on Nov. 24, Hulu's fan-favorite legal drama series "Reasonable Doubt" has been officially renewed for Season 5.
- Season 4 has become the series' most-watched season to date, with double-digit percentage gains over every prior season. "Reasonable Doubt" has been streamed for over 150 million hours globally across Hulu and Disney+.
- Season 4 has built momentum, with its newest episode surging more than +40% over the season debut (based on one day of views globally).
- "Reasonable Doubt" Season 4 stars series regulars Emayatzy Corinealdi, McKinley Freeman, Tim Jo, Angela Grovey, Durrell "Tank" Babbs and Meagan Good, alongside recurring guest stars Morris Chestnut, Joseph Sikora, Brandee Evans, La La Anthony, Rutina Wesley, Taylor Polidore Williams, DeVaughn Nixon and Alexxis Lemire.
- Season 4 has followed Jax's most loyal client at the center of a spiraling media disaster, which thrusts The Stewart Firm into a high-stakes battle where every move could mean survival … or collapse of the firm. As grief lingers and pressure mounts, one question looms: Can they rebuild in time, or will the cost of moving forward too quickly be everything they stand to lose?
- "Reasonable Doubt" is created, written and executive produced by Raamla Mohamed Hunter. Kerry Washington executive produces alongside Pilar Savone for Simpson Street, Larry Wilmore for Wilmore Films, Anton Cropper, Lena Cordina, Tamara Gregory and Erika L. Johnson. Shawn Holley, Jon Leshay and Zahir McGhee serve as co-executive producers. The series hails from Onyx Collective and is produced by 20th Television, a part of Disney Television Studios.
- "Reasonable Doubt" is part of Hulu's acclaimed lineup of original dramatic series, joining fan favorites like "Furious," "The Testaments," "Paradise" and upcoming series "The Spot," "The Land" and "Count My Lies."
